

SENATORS SCORE LAMAR FOR TRICKS AT THE PHONE

"Wolf" Tells Lobby Hunters Object Was to Get Ledyard in the Open.

TO SAVE LAUTERBACH.

Impersonation of Congressmen Was All a Part of His Financial Game.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—In an elaborate defense of his action in pleading the Democratic leaders of the House and the Senate to the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and of the personaling Congressman Palmer and Rorion, David Lamar declared to the Senate Lobby Committee to-day that it was only the "usual Wall street game." He insisted that he had been actuated by only "the highest public motives and that his plan had been two fold—to re-instate Edward Lauterbach as Morgan & Co.'s attorney and also to force a general reform in Wall street methods. The "Wolf of Wall street" was not as disreputable to-day as on his first appearance before the committee. The fact that he had been forced publicly to waive immunity from prosecution for his impersonations may have had some effect. He was not permitted to make speeches. Time after time he was highly rebuked by Chairman Overman, Senators Reed and Walsh, and finally he was sharply warned that he must stick to facts and not fancies or else be removed from the room. LAMAR GETS A REBUKE RIGHT AT START.

At the outset Lamar declared that he was well satisfied to leave his fate in the hands of Senators Overman, Nelson and Cummins. "As far as Senators Reed and Walsh are concerned," he said, "they have ruined many men before. I wanted to get them. It was a game of duplicity on their part as much as it was on mine. I wanted to give them a dead end and shut case, so that they would come out into the open. I used Mr. Lauterbach. I wanted to give them prepared evidence that Lauterbach had lied, and they fell into the trap. It was an open game and I got what I wanted."

Here Senators Reed and Overman both rebuked Lamar for his personalities, and he apologized, saying that he only wanted to tell the actual facts. "You see, Senators," Lamar resumed, "I felt certain that Ledyard knew it was Lamar talking and not Palmer. My ear has become so perfectly attuned that I could hear him putting branch telephone lines on. I called Ledyard up and offered him the entire National Government in partnership with Morgan & Co., with the exception of the President. You see I knew my man. I knew his nature. Then I went to Mr. Lauterbach and sent him to Mr. Ledyard because I knew Ledyard would think he had Lauterbach in a lie."

"Hold on, sir," broke in Senator Overman, "I want no more personalities. If you do not proceed in an orderly manner I will excuse you from the stand."

Walsh protested against excusing Lamar, declaring that he wanted to cross-examine him. "Why did you not tell us all this when you were on the stand first?" demanded Walsh. "Did," said Lamar. "Not in detail, of course, but I told you I gave Lauterbach the programme which Mr. Ledyard later produced."

"But you did not mention either Senator Stone or Speaker Clark by name in this connection."

"I think that my entire story shows that I did not withhold the facts. But," (Continued on Twelfth Page.)

Marquard went into the box for the Giants in the 8th and easily blanked the Cubs. He started the ninth by fanning Needham, a pinch hitter. Big Jeff Tesserau drew the assignment for the Giants. He was opposed by Lavender for the Cubs.

1,200 PICNICKERS IN PANIC ON BOAT IN HELL GATE TIDE

Tug Dodges Liner and Barge Swings Around and Goes Adrift in Current.

RUNS INTO A DRIFDGE.

Women and Children Get Bad Scare Before Lines Are Thrown Out.

Caught in a heavy Hell Gate eddy to-day, the barge Carina, carrying twelve hundred women and children to a picnic, narrowly escaped being dashed on the treacherous rocks in the channel. Valiant efforts by the Carina's tow, the tug William McAllister, and groups of men at work on the Connecting Railway Company's bridge across the river, prevented the barge from being pounded to pieces on the rocks and averted a river disaster of an appalling character. As it was, the screams of the panic-stricken women and children resounded up and down the river for blocks until the Carina was finally dragged into the quiet of the Sound.

The Carina, in tow of the McAllister, departed from the pier at Noble street, East River, bearing the parishioners of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension of Greenpoint, Brooklyn, on their annual excursion to the north shore of Long Island.

When the barge arrived in the swirling eddies of the Gate, made doubly dangerous because of the flood tide, the skipper noticed the giant steamship Massachusetts, one of the largest of the Sound vessels, steaming into the channel from the north. The tug swung to one side with its tow to give the big boat plenty of room.

Without warning the big, cumbersome barge was seized by powerful cross currents and tossed like a toy half way round. Before the astonished excursionists realized their peril the Carina had been shunted some distance ahead of its tow. Women and children ran to the railings and screamed. Again the barge was attacked by an eddy and driven almost against a Government dredge.

The Rev. Mr. W. E. Bentley, rector of the church and the handful of men aboard hurried along the rails and assured the terrified women that there was no danger. But these assurances were only of temporary effect, for once more a great current swung the Carina against Flood Rock. The grating and scraping of the Carina as she plunged heavily in the water awakened the keenest terror among the passengers. The tug McAllister darted about in the eddies, her crew striving heroically to get the slack out of their lines.

Hardly had the Carina escaped the peril of Flood Rock than she was caught by Scaly Rock, one of the land marks of the dangerous channel. The uproar aboard the barge reached such a volume that boats were put out from the pier and dozens of men began throwing lines to the Carina. The tug McAllister, however, had managed to get nearer to the barge and after she had slipped from scraping Scaly Rock, the line was made taut and the barge was swung out into calm water.

The McAllister then adjusted her lines and a new start was made for the picnic ground. Despite the calm assurances of Mr. Bentley and his assistants, many of the women were near collapse when they realized the peril they had faced.

MYSTERY OF GIRL FOUND IN A LAKE Baffles Officials

Miss Alice Crispell's Admirer Held, but No Motive for Murder Is Found.

LIKE GILLETTE CASE.

Possible Motive for Killing Revealed by Autopsy on Alice Crispell.

(Special to The Evening World.) WILKESBARRE, Pa., July 8.—County authorities have so far been baffled in their efforts to find any motive for the drowning of Miss Alice Crispell, whose body was found yesterday near a boat landing on the Harvey's Lake front. All that is lacking to make the drowning one of the most brutal murders of Luzerne County is the motive and this the authorities are striving to discover.

Herbert Johns, aged twenty-eight years, who for the last two years has been the girl's admirer, is in the county jail, being held on a charge of first degree murder. A strong circumstantial web has been woven about him.

Miss Crispell left the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Crispell, last Tuesday. She declared she was coming to Wilkesbarre to purchase trimmings for a dress. She also said she would probably visit relatives and possibly remain several days with them.

She was with Johns on the Fourth of July, the couple spending part of the day at the home of Johns in this city and later going to Harvey's Lake. Johns and the girl were seen together at 11:30 o'clock, which was the last time the girl was seen alive by any of her friends. They were then sitting on the boat landing where the body was found.

ADmits HE WAS WITH THE YOUNG WOMAN. Johns admits that he was with the girl at the hour mentioned, which is the time fixed by Mrs. F. J. Weckesser and Mrs. S. T. Nicholson, cottagers who were awakened by the shrill cries of a girl. Shortly before this time Miss Stella Oney, who had been in the company of Johns and Miss Crispell during the day, came along the lake front. She noticed the couple sitting on the landing where the water is about twelve feet deep and stopped, a few minutes to talk with them.

"I did not notice anything unusual," says Miss Oney. "I saw Alice several times during the day. She did not seem unhappy or troubled. I stopped to talk with her a minute at 11:30 o'clock P. M. and asked her if she was coming home. She answered, 'not just yet,' and I then went on alone."

Johns admits that Miss Oney stopped and talked with them. A few minutes later, he says, he was taken suddenly ill and decided to return to Wilkesbarre. Miss Crispell, he says, urged him to go on with her, promising to make arrangements with a relative to keep him over night. He refused the invitation and at about 11:30 o'clock left the girl, leaving her to walk one mile along a lonely lake front and about two miles more to her home in the country. He declares that he believed she would catch up with Miss Oney.

SAYS HE HAD NO REASON FOR KILLING HER. Johns clings tenaciously to this story. He admits courting the girl for two years and said that he had never quarrelled. He can assign no motive for the girl taking her own life and stoutly declares that he had no reason for killing her.

SAYS COHALAN TORE UP 55% RAKE-OFF LETTER

COHALAN'S ACCUSER WHO WAS THE FIRST TO GIVE TESTIMONY.

DUFFY SENTENCED TO THREE YEARS IN SING SING

Former 'Collector' for Sweeney Hears Judgment Before Crowd of Police.

Ex-Sergeant Peter Duffy was sentenced to Sing Sing prison to-day to a term of not less than three years nor more than four years by Supreme Court Justice Samuel A. Seabury in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. Attorney Abraham Levy asked the Court for a stay of execution of ten days in order to apply for a writ of reasonable doubt. The Court granted the stay.

District Attorney Whitman moved for the sentence of the former "collector" of ex-inspector Sweeney in the Harlem district. Duffy was convicted of bribery in accepting $5,000 from Julius Roth, keeper of an illegal resort in West One Hundred and Eighteenth street on Sept. 3, 1912. The verdict of guilty was found after a jury in a previous trial had died of record.

The courtroom was jammed with policemen off duty and other police men. In the number of spectators was Sheriff Julius Harbinger, who announced himself ready to escort Duffy up the river in the event that the Court decided on his commitment at once. After the District Attorney's motion for sentence, Mr. Levy moved for a stay of sentence and the applications. Then Mr. Levy started to argue for clemency and the Court interrupted.

"Duffy, the sentence of Court is that you be confined in Sing Sing prison at hard labor for a term of not less than three nor more than four years."

Duffy's ruddy face blanched. His rugged jaw dropped peremptorily and his powerful frame shook. His eyes fell to the floor while the Court pronounced sentence and remained downcast while he was being led from the room. There was no outburst when sentence was pronounced.

Mr. Levy stated that he would apply for a writ to-day. Meantime Duffy remains in the Tombs.

TELLS OF DEMAND FOR 10% FOR JOBS IN DEPARTMENT

Taken by Cohalan to Oakley and Goodwin, He Says, and From Them Got Contracts.

BY MARTIN GREEN, Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 8.—The foundation of the defense of Justice Daniel F. Cohalan was laid in the opening session of the hearing before the Joint Committees on Judiciary of the Senate and the Assembly to-day when John B. Stanchfield of counsel for the defense opposed with every legal weapon at his command the introduction of testimony designed to show that there existed an agreement between Justice Cohalan and John A. Connolly whereby Cohalan was to get 55 per cent. of the profits on jobs done by Connolly's Victor Heating Company for the city. It was brought out that there is no copy of such an agreement in existence, although Connolly claims he submitted the proposition to Justice Cohalan in writing.
